

Outcomes Based Governance

King-IV deals with an inclusive approach to corporate governance based on a set of fundamental principles, including corporate citizenship, stakeholder inclusivity, the organisation as an integral part of society and integrated thinking. King-IV represents an effort to move away from a compliance-focused approach to corporate governance and reporting to an action-orientated model designed to promote positive organisational change.

The second short course in the CVO programme examines outcomes-based governance and its application to emerging issues such as COVID and climate change. The course considers the drivers and consequences of good governance and how an outcomes-based approach to governance is essential for effective multi-capital management, stakeholder engagement and long-term value creation. On completion of the course, participants will have a detailed understanding of the importance of corporate governance for contemporary business. This understanding will further contribute to the skillset of Chief Value Officer aimed at bolstering economic, environmental, and social performance for organisations.

Wits University in partnership with SAICA, decided to create this series of short courses dealing with the role and function of the CVO specifically aimed at Chartered Accountant.

Some of the leading minds in corporate governance will provide input to, and lecture on the course including those from the Wits School of Accountancy and topic experts from the profession and business. These include:

- Prof Warren Maroun, Wits
- Adj Prof Yvette Lange, Wits
- Danielle Cerbone, Wits
- Zubair Wadee - Wits

The CVO Programme is part of a continuing research-driven enquiry into integrated reporting, integrated thinking and sustainable development being undertaken by the Wits School of Accountancy. It consists of three short courses, of which Outcomes Based Governance is the second
